Imagine the sweet sounds of a music box coming from a tree in the garden or a window. Woodstock Music Box Chimes are a new collection recently added to the company's very popular and best-selling line of chimes, bells, gongs, and other musical instruments. Available in Bamboo or Dragonfly, these music-box chimes ($20 each, 21" long) are unlike any other on the market.

Designed by Garry Kvistad, they are made of a long rectangular box, which houses music box rods that have been carefully tuned to an ancient Asian scale. The fan-shaped windcatcher, which hangs below the box, causes an internal mechanism to "comb" the rods when it is caught in the wind, making it sound amazingly like a music box. The white paper-covered box is decorated with black bamboo or dragonfly designs, giving the chime a clean, crisp, sophisticated look. Watch for new additions to this line in the near future.
